Children's Community Publishing Training for Adults

Children's Community Publishing training for adults is a professional learning opportunity suitable for librarians, teachers, early years professionals, family services staff, community leaders and artists.

Children's Community Publishing?

Community publishing is the phrase used to describe people getting together to make and circulate their own news, information and stories, often in the form of books, online newspapers, e-zines, collaborative websites, wikis and blogs. Community publishing is about people creating, editing and publishing their own content. The forum is created and facilitated by an individual or a small group of like-minded people, but the community is in the driving seat.

You will learn ...

In this hands-on workshop, you will learn how making books with children and families can be introduced in to the library, school, playgroup or council calendar in a range of ways. Training centres on how to support the focus of 'building people and community' in a new community context.

Community Publishing Training is a hands-on capacity building workshop where the participants will learn:

- how to make books with children and families;
- about children's community publishing concepts;
- the process of responding to a theme by producing a collaborative book;
- about WePublish, the new digital publishing tool developed by Kids' Own Publishing, and its potential.

Kids' Own Publishing places children directly in the world of books & literacy.

About WePublish

WePublish is a website and App powered by Kids' Own Publishing.

WePublish is a place where children and their communities can share books they have created. WePublish is putting the art of storytelling into the digital realm and back into the hands of children everywhere.

WePublish exists in a world where kids play, learn, laugh, create, grow, and explore – both indoors AND outdoors, in school AND at home, independently AND collaboratively with friends, educators and family.

Our Approach

Kids' Own Publishing places children directly in the world of books and literacy. We adopt a child-centred community development philosophy that ensures that every book tells a relevant story for the authors and illustrators. Kids' Own Publishing's way of working is rooted in a human rights framework, with recognition that children's ideas and views are of value to the wider community. By training adults, you will join a network of communities that put kid's voices at the heart of your next publihing project.
